SUPER SATURDAY SEMINAR

RACE AND POLICE: WHY THE NATIONAL DISCUSSION MATTERS IN OUR CASES

Welcome by ACDL-NJ President

Linda Foster Esq.
8:55 am - 9:00 am

Keynote Address

Policing as Trauma:

Litigating Race and Trauma in a Criminal Case

9:00 am – 10:30 am

While the nation – and the world – has watched with outrage the brutal killings of black and brown people, defenders know all too well that police “brutality” is much broader than these horrible killings. Our clients encounter aggressive policing in every aspect of their lives, and for many, the daily, discriminatory encounters with the police are overwhelming and traumatic. In this interactive workshop, we will discuss the mental and physical trauma caused by stop, frisk and interrogation and learn how to incorporate “policing as trauma” arguments into our advocacy at every stage of a criminal case, including client interviews, detention and probable cause hearings, Fourth and Fifth Amendment motions to suppress, motions for a trauma-informed mens rea, self-defense arguments, and sentencing.

Keynote Speaker:

What’s Race Got to do with it? Litigating Fourth Amendment Issues

10:30 am – 11:30 am

Challenges to searches and seizures are fact-specific and circumstance-based, and one factor that is often overlooked is the role that race and ethnicity plays in the interaction between a citizen and law enforcement. This session will discuss framing Fourth Amendment challenges through a new lens in hopes of gaining true justice for the client.

Speaker:

Juval Scott, Esq.
*Federal Public Defender
Western District of Virginia*

Accessing Police Records

11:30 am – 12:30 pm

Although police misconduct records are generally exempt from access under OPRA, this session will discuss how to use OPRA as a tool to investigate police departments and officers. It will also discuss bills pending in our Legislature that address police transparency.

Speaker:

C.J. Griffin, Esq.
*Director of the Justice Gary S. Stein
Public Interest Center at

Misdemeanors and the Racialization of American Crime

12:30 pm -1:30 pm

Misdemeanors comprise 80 percent of U.S. criminal dockets. They are also the frontline mechanism through which people of color are disproportionately swept into the criminal system and labeled as criminals for minor offenses, or sometimes for no crimes at all.

Speaker:

Alexandra Natapoff, Esq.
*Harvard University’s
Lee S. Kreindler Professor of Law*
